

Southern Slang Bio

Southern Slang is gaining a lot of momentum in Florida having recently opened for country music sensation Rodney Atkins in Orlando; Headlining at numerous fairs and various local and regional venues. Signed to TMG in 2010 for a 1 year deal and released their debut self titled CD “Southern Slang”, it came out with positive reviews. The band is receiving air play on a number of local radio stations with their songs “Georgia Rain” and “Bailout”, as well as press coverage from local news stations, papers and magazines.

Formed in 2009 by seasoned players Danny Wooten (lead singer/ Songwriter), Brian “Daz” Wass (Drums/Back up vocals), Southern Slang quickly became a sought after band in North Central Florida. From its inception, Southern Slang has explored music outside the bounds of traditional country music with songs such as; “Bailout”; “Country Metal “and “Hit the Ground Running”.

Southern Slang charms audiences with shows that are a powerful punch of country rock, playing set that are fun and diverse. The band plays originals that sound like new classics and span a range of country and rock.

Wooten's incredible baritone and vocal range covers everything from Johnny Cash to contemporary greats such as Blake Shelton, while Lemeer's nimble guitar keeps pace with rock solos and country ballads. Daz and Wise add solid stylish driving beats.

Equally impressive is the bands songwriting. Wooten joins a tradition of storyteller; He and the band create songs that are immediately accessible and are honest, sometimes hilarious, and sometimes sincere. Original ballads like "Daddy's Little Girl" and "Georgia Rain" are creative additions to more of love and coming of age songs. Country Metal and Hit the Ground Running are autobiographical signatures and illustrations of the bands approach to its rocking county soul.
